Columbia Law Professor Named U.S. Judge

Jack B. Weinstein, a Columbia law professor whom Senator Robert F. Kennedy pushed for a spot on New York State Democratic ticket this year, was nominated for a Federal district judgeship by President Johnson, to be approved by the Senate. Professor Weinstein will succeed Judge Leo F. Rayfield, says the New York Times, who has retired, in the Eastern District of New York.

During the convention in Buffalo, Professor Weinstein was proposed for Attorney General to the Senator, who reacted enthusiastically. The suggestion came from the O'Connor camp. At about the same time aides of Frank D. O'Connor reported that Senator Kennedy was opposing Howard Samuels, an upstate industrialist, for the nomination for Lieutenant Governor.

A spokesman for the Senator then told delegates that the only candidate Mr. Kennedy really cared about was Professor Weinstein. It even appeared for a time that Mr. Weinstein would be nominated.

The problem was ethnic and regional balance. Professor Weinstein and Controller Arthur Levitt would have replaced two Jews from New York City on the Democratic ticket. The nomination for Lieutenant Governor would then have had to go to an upstater, and almost definitely a non-Jew.

Since Mr. Samuels is Jewish, Mr. Weinstein's nomination would have all but killed his chances. Many observers felt Senator Kennedy supported Mr. Weinstein in part to block Mr. Samuels. Mr. Samuels was eventually nominated, and Frank A. Sedita, Mayor of Buffalo, was picked for Attorney General.

Professor Weinstein, who is 45, has taught law at Columbia since 1948 and has been a professor since 1958. He took a leave from 1963 to 1965, says the New York Times, to serve as County Attorney of Nassau County. He lives with his wife and three sons in Great Neck, L.I.

Professor Weinstein's specialties are civil procedure and evidence. He served as a consultant on procedure to the Temporary Commission on the Courts from 1955 to 1958, and has advised the New

Largest Bank In Philadelphia and Bell Telephone To Help U.S. Jews To End Under-Utilization On Executive, Managerial Levels

The first Pennsylvania Banking and Trust Company, Philadelphia's largest bank, is actively looking for Jewish applicants who might eventually qualify for top executive positions.

At the same time, the bank has embarked on a program seeking to eliminate "the subtle anti-Jewish atmosphere that the young Jewish trainee thinks he feels."

These moves were announced by John R. Bunting Jr., executive vice president of the bank, at the annual dinner meeting of the Philadelphia Chapter of the American Jewish Committee at the Warwick Hotel.

"We consider it desirable to bring a leading Jewish figure into the power structure of our bank," Mr. Bunting said.

On September 1, the A.J.C. made public the results of a banking survey that showed, the Committee said, that forty-five out of the fifty largest commercial banks in the United States had no Jews among their senior officers.

Mr. Bunting noted in his address that the Committee's figures for Philadelphia indicated that only about one-half of one per cent of the officers of six major commercial banks in Philadelphia were Jewish.

In examining the situation in his own bank, he discovered a scarcity of Jewish senior officials in spite of the bank's non-discrimination policy, he said.

The reason, he said, is that undoubtedly at some point in banking history there had been hostility toward Jewish employees and "the after effects lingered long after the hostility died."

As a consequence, he added, few Jews of top rank enter banking, and of those that do, a good percentage leave after a few years, not because of hostility but because "the overall environment is discouraging to them."

This is the situation his bank is now seeking to improve, Mr. Bunting told his audience. The bank has not promoted any of its Jewish officers "beyond what was upcoming in any event," he said.

"We have, however, shifted their assignments somewhat in a way that we hope will make it clear that they are not relegated to working on a certain type, or class, of accounts," he reported.

"And in a few days we will very likely officially announce the first Negro officer in Philadelphia banking."

He received the Committee's annual human relations award.

The Anti-Defamation League of Bnai Brith announced that it had begun a cooperative program with the Bell Telephone System to end what it described as the system's "under-utilization of Jews" on its executive and managerial levels.

Benjamin R. Epstein, the League's national director, writing in the November issue of its Bulletin, reported that the cooperative project involved the League's participation in the Bell System training workshops for college recruiters.

The purpose, Mr. Epstein said, is to help the system implement its merit employment policy by "educating its recruitment staff to the vast potential available among Jewish college students."

Arnold Forster, the League's general counsel, said that an important aspect of the project was to "paint a true image of the American Jew, his abilities, his talents, above all, his desire to be integrated in all levels of the American community."

In this connection, Mr. Forster said that the League's staff, headed by Harold Braverman, director of the discriminations department, lectures on the distorted images of "American Jews that personnel people usually have."

Then again, the League makes available information and statistics on American Jewish college students who are eager to enter industry.

Mr. Epstein said that the project represented a "major breakthrough," pointing out that neither voluntary merit employment standards nor fair employment practices laws and ordinances, which make such standards mandatory in many cities and states, had been successful in ending "the long-time dearth of Jews" in "certain areas of American industry."

Under the direction of Mr. Braverman, the agency has already participated in Bell System recruitment workshops in Los Angeles, Philadelphia, New Brunswick, N. J., Hampton Bays, Va., and Montreal.

In addition, the League's twenty-eight regional offices throughout the country are making Bell System's enforcement of its merit employment policy known to Jewish college students.

Two Polish-Born Brothers Convicted In Austria Of Mass Murder Of Jews

Two Polish-born Austrian brothers were found guilty in Vienna of having taken part in the mass executions of Jews in Poland in World War II and of individual murders of Jews. Wilhelm Mauer, fifty-two years old was sentenced to twelve years' imprisonment and Johann Mauer, forty-eight, to eight years. The four years they have spent in jail, says the New York Times, since they were accused will be deducted from their sentences.

They were acquitted at a trial before a Salzburg court last February when the jury found that they had acted under duress. That decision was suspended by the trial judges because of "obvious error" and a retrial was ordered.

After the second trial, which lasted three weeks, the jury, five women and three men, deliberated 11¼ hours before reaching a verdict. It was received by the public with mixed feelings.

Some Austrians expressed relief that the Mauers had not been acquitted, as was Franz Novak, chief transport officer for the organization set up by Adolf Eichmann to convey Jews from all over Europe to concentration camps. On the other hand, anti-Nazis were disappointed by what they regarded as too lenient a sentence. They felt a life sentence would have been more appropriate.

Between 1941 and 1943 more than 50,000 Jews were killed in the Polish Galician city of Stanislav by about 200 SS men and some Ukrainian auxiliaries. The Mauers had volunteered to serve in the SS, the Nazi Elite guard.

The prosecutor, in his final plea declared:

"The honor of the German soldier cannot be soiled more than to compare them with murderers behind the lines. At a time when a whole German army was annihilated in Stalingrad, people like the Mauer brothers killed noncombatants to their heart's content."

"I am convinced," he told a hushed courtroom, "that the German soldiers had not known what disgusting, murderous crimes were committed behind their lines."

The prosecution set out to prove that the accused had acted of their own free will and in many cases had killed for sheer pleasure.

For the first time in a war-crimes trial in Vienna, the prosecution examined at length the line of defense, previously offered successfully in Austria, that SS men, like soldiers at the front, faced death if they refused orders, says the New York Times. Eichmann's defense along similar lines was rejected in the Israeli courts.

The prosecution demonstrated that no SS man was ever known to have been severely punished for refusing to kill Jews in Nazi-occupied territory. This was corroborated by testimony from former SS men.

Sponsors Of Proposed Memorial Ask N.Y. To Refund $600,000

Sponsors of the Adele Rosenwald Levy Memorial proposed for Riverside Park have abandoned it, they informed Mayor Lindsay of New York. Mrs. Nathan Straus, co-chairman of the committee that had raised about $600,000 and had given it to the city for the memorial, asked that the money be refunded.

"Your administration has placed one obstacle after another in the way," Mrs. Straus wrote to the Mayor. As a result, she said, the committee had decided, says the New York Times, that "under the present administration the playground and community center cannot be built and operated successfully."

A spokesman for the Mayor said he would have no comment until he had had time to study the letter, which was delivered by messenger to City Hall.

Mrs. Levy, a founder of the Citizens Committee for Children, died in 1960. In her memory, a committee of friends and relatives proposed to build a community center and playground on the slope of Riverside Park, at 103d Street. Designed by Louis Kahn, architect, and Isamu Noguchi, the sculptor, it was to have cost over one million dollars, with the committee and the city sharing the cost.

Parks Commissioner Thomas P. F. Hoving, who has never been in favor of the proposed memorial, said that he hoped the committee would not "just pick up its marbles and thus penalize the children of New York."

"Instead," he continued, "it should listen to the great majority

Israeli Secret Agents Foiled Very Dressy Copper Plot In Tailored Style

The Shin Beth, Israel's security agency, was credited at Tel Aviv, Israel, with foiling an international plot to demolish a railway bridge between Zambian copper mines and that country's coast. Businessmen seeking to drive up the world price of copper were said to have been behind the conspiracy, says the New York Times. A news blackout on the case ordered by a Tel Aviv magistrate, Mrs. Ben Itto, was lifted at the recommendation of the police.

It was then disclosed that five suspects had been brought before Mrs. Ben Itto charged with "conspiracy against a friendly country" and released on 2,500 Israel pounds ($833) each.

They included Mrs. Violet Elliot, daughter of a local lawyer who in 1964 married an American, Jay Aubrey Elliot. Mr. Elliot was held in $50,000 bail after his arrest in New York.

The other suspects are Raphael Zoriano, of Ramat Gan; Itzhak Markowitz, and Benjamin Adut, of Haifa; and Abraham Ronen, of Ramat Hasharon.

Mr. Adut and Mr. Markowitz were identified as former members of Jewish terrorist organizations that fought British forces in Palestine.

Sources at Tel Aviv said Mr. and Mrs. Elliot had arrived there in September and had tried to recruit demolition experts for the Zambian job. Mr. Elliot was said to have given up the idea of recruiting Israelis and returned to the United States on October 13.

A police source said he was then already under surveillance and may have suspected he was being watched. His wife remained with her relatives in Tel Aviv and reportedly established contact with potential saboteurs. The police then stepped in and made arrests.

A second man, Rolf Duenbier, was arrested along with Mr. Elliot in New York and was held in $20,000 bail. Both men, who were

★ COMBINED JEWISH APPEAL ★

For Allied Jewish Community Services and United Israel Appeal reported total receipts of $1,823,670, or 38.4% of its objective on November 8. The campaign will continue through November 21. Max Feldman, general chairman, asked for the support of all Montrealers "to make this campaign the most successful in our history." He pointed out that this is the 50th united, organized, fund-raising campaign to be conducted in behalf of Jewish sponsored social welfare agencies, the oldest fund-raising effort of its kind in Canada. The Combined Jewish Appeal benefits more than 50 organizations serving health, welfare, cultural, and relief and rehabilitation activities overseas through its partners, Allied Jewish Community Services and United Israel Appeal. AJCS is the central organization for coordination, planning, budgeting and financing of Jewish communal agencies in Montreal, many of which offer services on a non-sectarian basis. The United Israel Appeal and the United Jewish Relief Agencies of Canadian Jewish Congress render assistance in Europe, North Africa, the Moslem countries of the Middle East, and Israel, in the form of Canadian commodities and credits. Combined Jewish Appeal also supports educational and cultural programs on a national basis throughout Canada. Among 1,000 delegates from cities all over North America at the 35th General Assembly of the Council of Jewish Federations and Welfare Funds in Los Angeles, until November 20, are: Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Abbey, Alvin Bronstein, executive director of Allied Jewish Community Services and a consultant for a special program on Canadian Jewish Communities which will be held at the Assembly; Gordon Brown, chairman of the A.J.C.S. executive committee, and Mrs. Brown; Mr. and Mrs. Morty Brownstein, Mr. and Mrs. Irving Halperin, N. L. Rappaport, Q.C., chairman of the AJCS social legislation committee; Mrs. E. I. Rolf, Mr. and Mrs. Joel Rottman, Sigmund Unterberg, executive treasurer of Canadian Jewish Congress, and Mrs. Unterberg; and Emanuel Weiner, director of community planning for A.J.C.S. Mr. Abbey is the 1966 winner of the leadership award and Mrs. Brownstein and Mr. Halperin are the winners of the Barkoff leadership award for 1966. The CJFWF is the co-ordinating body of 220 Jewish community organizations throughout North America, including the Allied Jewish Community Services of Montreal. The Montreal delegation will participate in a special inter-city meeting at the General Assembly, dealing with suburban area involvement in community planning; with: Boston, Chicago, Los Angeles, and Philadelphia. "Jewish Federations In The Next Decade" and "1967 Campaigns, For How Much And For What," will be examined for the entire Assembly as to what needs to be done to insure top quality leadership in the future; what effect government expansion in health and welfare services will have on the scope and nature of voluntary services; and what the possibilities are in the next decade for pioneering contributions by federations and their beneficiary agencies in health and welfare, Jewish education, and other areas. Women's division campaigning and year-round service will also be discussed. Stanley Abramovitch, education consultant of the Joint Distribution Committee, will report to Bnai Brith Hillel Foundation in Montreal on November 23 and 24 on recent developments in Europe, North Africa, and the Middle East, including Israel. Hillel is a constituent member of A.J.C.S. Mr. Abramovitch will visit American campuses and Queen's University in Kingston, Ont. His first J.D.C. assignment was as education director for displaced persons camps in the American Zone in Germany. He was appointed JDC director for Iran in 1949. On his arrival in Teheran he found thousands of Jews streaming into the city from Iraq in an effort to get to Israel. He played a leading role in organizing an air lift which brought 25,000 Jews, most of them from Iraq, to Israel. In Iran he uncovered conditions of extreme poverty among the Jewish population and helped to organize a health and welfare program which by 1950 was assisting 26,000 of the country's 90,000 Jews. Mr. Abramovitch, a British subject, was born in Poland in 1920 and was brought to England at the age of 13. He is a graduate of London University, Teachers College of Columbia University, and also of Jews' College of London, the foremost rabbinical institution in Great Britain.

Mrs. Norman Naimark, president, urged the membership to continue to support and participate fully in all of the organization's projects. The Society is proud to be a member of the Combined Health Appeal again, participating in its campaign with other health organizations to eliminate duplication of effort and expense and to reduce the number of appeals to the public for funds. To make this appeal go over the top, Mrs. Naimark stated that every member must help to educate the public to give once for many organizations. of the community and make its generous gift available for a playground on a new site. This will win universal acclaim and honor the memory of Adele Levy in a truly significant manner."

Mr. Hoving said that the proposal abandoned by the committee was "an unworthy memorial to a great lady. Well-intentioned but ill-conceived, it was the right building on the wrong site. The city cannot afford the skyrocketing costs our engineers have predicted for this structure."

As soon as the proposal was announced in 1961, neighborhood opposition began, with nearby residents arguing that they preferred to keep the slope clear of buildings.

On his final day as Mayor, Robert F. Wagner signed contracts for construction of the memorial, despite the incoming administration's objection to the project. The committee then gave the city the money that it now wants refunded, says the New York Times. After Mr. Lindsay became Mayor, Mrs. Max Asculi, sister of the late Mrs. Levy, accused Parks Commissioner Hoving of secretly working to strengthen the opposition.

POLISH-BORN BROTHERS CONVICTED

One point the defense attorney made was that people could not be described as murderers for killing Jews at a time when this was not an offense.

His main argument, that there was an "international Jewish conspiracy" against the defendants, was rejected by the presiding judge, Dr. Konrad Wynetal, who said that the testimony by the former SS men had incriminated the Mauers.

MY FATHER: A VETERAN LABOR ZIONIST

During World War II, within a week after my father found out that I had been shipped to England at the tender age of eighteen, I received a letter from him, advising me, in a fatherly way, not to go out with any Jewish girls. How come?

Was he becoming such a liberal that he wanted me to learn the value of social assimilation? No. It was because he reasoned that if I kept company with shikses, I wouldn't want to marry them, even if one of them might want to marry me.

But English Jewish girls, and their mothers, were, according to my father, always looking for American Jewish husbands. The way to avoid a hasty wartime marriage was to stay away from Jewish girls.

But my father does not even carry out this idea consistently. He is very adaptable, which is another way of saying that he changes his mind easily, depending on the time and circumstances.

Now his oldest grandson — my son — is away as a college freshman since last September. Within a couple of months after he left, Kenny was being bombarded with worried letters from Pop saying that, while everything Kenny was doing sounded fine and wonderful, he was afraid that there were insufficient Jewish influences in Kenny's life.

"Influences" mean two things to my father: one is that Kenny is not active in any of the Jewish organizations at the college, and the other is that he might find a girl at the college to marry who would be, God forbid, a Gentile.

Which shows that my father's horizons have broadened in this last quarter of a century from worrying that I might marry a Jewish girl from some place too far away to now worrying that his seventeen-year-old grandson might not marry a Jewish girl from any place. We always tell my father not to worry about whom people in the family will marry. None of us have made a bad mistake yet, but that only proves to him that his worrying has done some good and, like the company that rents automobiles, he worries harder.

But this does not mean that you can explain my father as just another traditional, old-fashioned fellow with old ideas. Whenever we begin to feel that he is becoming a little too old-fashioned and set in his ways, up comes something to remind us that he is still as young at heart and modern in spirit as when he ran off to redeem Palestine fifty years ago. He is just not a consistent old fogey, even now.

When he found out a couple of years ago that Martin Luther King was going to pay a visit to his corner of Gay and Monument Streets, he was out there waiting for King from early in the morning to make sure that proper welcome was extended personally from my father to M.L.K.

He always goes where the action is, even now. When the famous civil rights march on Washington took place in 1963, with a quarter-million people there, my old man trudged onto a bus, threaded his way through crowds of people, and marched with them all, even though he was older than at least 249,900 of the entire parade.

But, modern as he is, he never forgets who he is or where he comes from; so, as he milled around and marched around Washington on that fantastic day, he looked and watched and wondered who all the newcomers and strangers were. All the while, he kept searching for old faces from the Poale Zion or other Jewish organizations, with old, old histories like his own of interest in behalf of social justice.

Now, time takes its toll, and not many of his generation or the groups that he has been connected with joined in that march. The cast changes, even though the play is the same — but my father, in his old fashioned way, keeps his eyes open, his heart broad, his sense of right and wrong and good and bad, keen and timely. Some things change, but my father stays the same. But he does so inconsistently — because some other things stay the same while my father changes.

He is absolutely unpredictable. I marvel at the surprises he continually gives me, even though I should have long since gotten used to being surprised. He is always full of plans and projects and ideas about things, some of the best of which make absolutely no sense.

My father is like a snowstorm. In general, a snowstorm is a snowstorm, but no two snowflakes are alike and every particular snowstorm is highly individualistic.

So is my father. I marvel at my mother. I think she is one of the luckiest women in the world to have him for a husband, at the same time that I cannot for the life of me know how she can stand being his wife. To have lived in his family is a rare and lucky privilege, even though, at many times it has seemed to be damned near impossible.

Now, that is not logical either, but I guess that consistency really is the product of a small mind — and my father's mind is not small, his life has not been burdened with much consistency, and of all the things that we love him for, I think we mostly appreciate that he has always kept us guessing and kept us on our toes.

When we complain that our feet hurt, he tells us to sit down for a bit; and, meanwhile, keep listening.

My Father: A Veteran Labor Zionist With Lots Of Other Ideas, Too

By Marvin Braiterman, whose father, William Braiterman, of Baltimore, Maryland, was honored at the Third Seder of the Baltimore Labor Zionist Movement; in the Jewish Frontier

To really understand my father you have to appreciate not only his consistent dedication to the things that he is interested in, but also his charming and maddening inconsistency. The truth of the matter is that my father has some logical ideas and does many logical things; and I really think that he is a great man. But a logical man? That he is not. I could give you a hundred illustrations, but I'll confine myself only to a few.

My brother, Sheldon, mentions it in his letter that my father has maintained an active involvement with his status as a veteran of the Jewish Legion. His house is full of military memorabilia, and you would think that he is one of those people who will never forget the good old Army years, and who will never die but only fade away.

But all of my father's interest in things military and soldierly is completely confined to the Jewish Legion. Sheldon describes him as a sort of Kentucky colonel of the Jewish Legion. But his role as a veteran is not even as logical as that. Actually, he is more analogous to a Hungarian admiral.

My father, old soldier that he is, wouldn't let us join the Boy Scouts when we were kids because he felt that with the uniforms, the saluting, and all that, the organization was too militaristic. If, after World War II, I had tried to join something like, say, the American Legion — after all, I am a veteran, too — my father would have been fit to be tied.

You should see my father blush when we sometimes refer to him as "the Commander." However, even though he might think it is all kind of silly, he works like a Trojan to keep the Jewish Legion veterans together, because he thinks that it is a worthwhile form of Zionist activity.

You might say that his attitude is not really so illogical. Even though my father is a Jewish veteran by biography, he may be a pacifist by conviction. Not a bit.

In 1932, I was in the second grade, and our teacher, a sturdy Anglo-Saxon type of grey-haired lady, told us to go home and find out all about the Presidential election that was then going on. The next day, I dutifully reported to the class that the election was between President Hoover and Norman Thomas, and that Norman Thomas figured to win, because my father was going to vote for him.

(In those days, whenever I needed to know something about the outside world, I asked my father what he was going to do or what he could tell me, and I always went along with what he said. This is a habit I have long since given up. I cannot even pretend to try to walk in my father's footsteps, because, to do so, would take me to a lot of interesting places, but I would be getting there in circles.)

Anyhow, none of the other kids had ever heard of Norman Thomas in 1932, but that is nothing compared to me — as of that morning, I had never heard of Franklin Roosevelt.

Years later, I found out that the reason he was for Norman Thomas in 1932 was because Thomas had been endorsed by — guess who? — the Poale Zion. By the late 1930's, both my father and the Poale Zion were strongly in Roosevelt's camp, and Norman Thomas had become another cranky isolationist as the Second World War approached. You should have heard what my father, the pacifist who wouldn't let us join the Boy Scouts, used to call isolationists then. You wouldn't believe it.

Some people think you can explain my father in terms of excessive Jewish chauvinism, but he even defies that label. For example, I remember when he gave me advice about my social life.

AMERICAN R.C. CARDINALS, ABOUT 40 ARCHBISHOPS AND BISHOPS JOIN JEWISH LEADERS IN CEREMONY

In an event believed to be unprecedented in the history of America's religious communities, all five of the American Roman Catholic Cardinals and about 40 Archbishops and Bishops joined in a ceremony with Jewish leaders at a luncheon reception at the board of directors offices of The Catholic University, in Washington, D.C.

The occasion was the presentation by the American Jewish Committee of commemorative plaques to the five Cardinals and to Archbishop Patrick A. O'Boyle, of Washington, chairman of the National Conference of Catholic Bishops, in "heartfelt appreciation" for the leadership given by American members of the Roman Catholic hierarchy in behalf of the passage last year by Vatican Council II of the declaration on relations with non-Christian religions, and of its implementation.

The five Cardinals honored, all of whom were present for the event, are: Richard Cardinal Cushing, of Boston; James Francis Cardinal McIntyre, of Los Angeles; Joseph Cardinal Ritter, of St. Louis; Lawrence Cardinal Shehan, of Baltimore; and Francis Cardinal Spellman, of New York. The cardinals and bishops were meeting in Washington for the annual Conference of the American Catholic Bishops.

Cardinal Spellman, Dean of the American Bishops, received in behalf of the Catholic Bishops of the United States, a set of two tablets of the Ten Commandments, which bear the following inscription: "The American Jewish Committee presents to The Catholic Bishops of the United States this symbol of our enduring common moral and spiritual bonds, November 13, 1966; 30 Heshvan 5727. The tablets of the Ten Commandments, hand-wrought in Hebrew letters made of silver and bronze, quarried from mines in the Holy Land by an Israeli craftsman, will be placed permanently at the headquarters of the Catholic Bishops, at the National Catholic Welfare Conference in Washington. Each of the five Cardinals received a commemorative plaque based on a design of Torah breastplates.

Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey headed a group of national officials who accepted invitations to be present. Archbishop O'Boyle presided as chairman of the ceremonies.

Making the presentations for the American Jewish Committee at the historic event were: Judge Joseph M. Proskauer, honorary president; and Charles H. Silver, consultant to the Mayor of the City of New York and former president of the Board of Education of New York City, both of them leaders over many years in efforts to improve Jewish-Christian relations.

Cardinal Spellman, responding in behalf of the American Catholic Bishops, presented a scroll to the American Jewish Committee, which in turn was accepted by Morris B. Abram, AJC president and U.S. Representative on the United Nations Human Rights Commission.

Rabbi Marc H. Tanenbaum, director of the Interreligious Affairs Department at the Committee, offered a 15th Century Jewish benediction in honor of Popes and Cardinals with whom Jews have had friendly relations, to conclude the ceremonies.

During the preparatory phase of Vatican Council II, the American Jewish Committee was invited by Vatican officials to submit detailed research data on certain crucial points in Jewish-Christian relations then under consideration by the Catholic Church, and to suggest steps toward better understanding between the two religious communities. Three memoranda to this effect were thereupon prepared and transmitted to Augustin Cardinal Bea, the president of the Secretariat for Promoting Christian Unity.

In March, 1963, the American Jewish Committee organized a meeting of leading Orthodox, Conservative, and Reform Jewish scholars and rabbinic leaders, who met with Cardinal Bea in New York at the Institute of Human Relations, AJC's national headquarters, to explore together the major issues on Jewish-Christian relations that were subsequently dealt with by the Vatican Council Declaration on Non-Christian Religions.

Founded in 1906, the American Jewish Committee is the pioneer human relations agency in America combating bigotry, protecting the civil and religious rights of Jews, and advancing the cause of human rights for all.

PLAN FOR RESEARCH CENTER IN NAZISM WHERE NAZIS PLANNED TO WIPE OUT JEWS

Dr. Nahum Goldmann, president of the World Jewish Congress, disclosed plans to establish an international research center at the villa in Wannsee, the West Berlin suburb where Nazi leaders in 1942 laid their plans to wipe out Europe's Jews, says the New York Times. Dr. Goldmann, who came to West Berlin to discuss the project, said Mayor Willy Brandt had indicated his willingness to make the building available.

The center, for which a private founding committee was set up last month, plans to study and collect data not only on Jewish problems but on all aspects of Nazism. Its proposed name is International Document Center for the Research of National Socialism and Its Consequences. If the project finds sufficient support, work at Wannsee could begin next spring.

The villa in Wannsee is used as a student dormitory. The rambling house, untouched by war destruction, stands in a large garden on the shores of the lake for which the suburb is named.

On January 20, 1942, Nazi leaders under SS Gen. Reinhard Heydrich and SS Col. Adolf Eichmann convened in the building for a secret conference to lay their plans for a "final solution" for the Jews of Europe, meaning their extermination.

The Nazi leaders plotted to kill about eleven million Jews in Germany and the European countries then under German control. At least six million actually died in gas chambers, in concentration camps, and in massacres.

Dr. Goldmann said the use of the building would have a "symbolic character."

Dr. Eugen Gerstenmaier, President of the West German Bundestag, first suggested that it would be better to tear down the house and erect a memorial on its site. But he later changed his mind, Dr. Goldmann said, explaining that Dr. Gerstenmaier had misunderstood the project.

The center is to be financed through funds from individual donors and foundations. Dr. Goldmann expects foundations in the United States, West Germany, and other countries to show interest in the work, says the New York Times. One of the projects to be undertaken at Wannsee is the collection and study of legal files and documents used by West German courts in war-crimes trials.
